

THE GAZETTE.

WEDNESDAY AUGUST 29.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

FOR PRESIDENT.
BENJAMIN HARRISON,
OF INDIANA.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT.
LEVI P. MORTON,
OF NEW YORK.

STATE TICKET.

For Governor—W. D. HOARD, of Jefferson.

For Lieutenant Governor—C. W. LIND, of Grant.

For Secretary of State—ELIOT J. TIMM, of Kenosha.

For Treasurer—M. D. HANSHAW, of Winnebago.

For Attorney General—E. E. ESTABROOK, of Manitowish.

For Superintendent of Public Instruction—J. B. TRACY, of Winnebago.

For Railroad Commissioner—ALEX. PETERSON, of Crawford.

For Insurance Commissioner—PHILIP CHUBB, of Rock.

FIRST CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT CONVENTION.

There will be a Republican Convention for the first Congressional District of Wisconsin held at Clinton Junction, on Thursday, Aug. 30, at two o'clock p. m., for the purpose of placing in nomination a Republican candidate for Member of Congress; also to elect a Congressional District Committee for the coming two years, and for the transaction of any other business that may properly come before the convention.

The several counties in the District will be entitled to representation as follows: Jefferson 6, Kenosha 3, Racine 3, Rock 13, Walworth 5, W. H. Evans, Chas. Com. G. A. YULIS, Secy.

A good many democratic editors seem concerned just now about the outbreak of a war with Canada. They would all have to move into Mexico in that case to escape the draft.

It is a striking fact that the annual construction of railroads in this country just about equals the entire mileage of the roads in 1850. In that year there were 9,021 miles of railroad in operation; in 1855, 18,871; in 1857, 24,508; and in 1880, 39,035. There are now about 150,000.

The coming protectionist politicians who are charged with the task of securing New Jersey and Connecticut for the democratic party are nearly frantic over the speeches which the Old Roman is making. Their condition was rendered sufficiently desperate by Cleveland's free trade message, but Thurman sees Cleveland and goes him many points better.

In Lockport, New York, there is a big pulp mill. Mr. Senator David H. McMillan, of Buffalo, says the following incident lately took place at that mill: "The mill is owned by a democrat named Peterson, and I visited it in company with several wealthy Englishmen who were making a tour of this country. We had gone to Lockport to see the aluminum works, the largest in this country. One of the Englishmen is a manufacturer of wood pulp in England, and hearing that there was a wood pulp mill near by, he decided to visit it. The Englishman was much interested in the machinery, and finally said to Mr. Peterson: 'How much do you pay your men?' Peterson replied: 'I pay them $9 a week.' The Englishman smiled and said: 'I pay my men $2.75 a week and I suspect as soon as you pass the Mills bill and lower your tariff on wood pulp a little I will be able to undersell you badly.' Peterson smiled a very sickly smile at this statement, and seemed pondering deeply when we left his factory. I have been wondering since if he will vote for Cleveland and the Mills bill."

CENTRE.

—The grange meeting last Saturday was a grand success, actually. The following persons were assigned to take part in the programme at the September monthly meeting:

Music—Mrs. Louise Crow and daughter.

Select reading—Fannie Blossdale.

Essay—How to educate the girls—Mrs. R. J. Nott.

Resolved, That the American continent should be protected from all foreign emigrants or laborers.

Affirmative—Benjamin Blossdale.

Negative—Dr. Joseph Craden.

There will be a grand rally at the Republican club meeting next Saturday evening. All who wish to unite in the rally at the Rock county fair from Center are requested to be present at this meeting. Speakers will be present and the meeting profitable.

—Rock County Pomona Grange meets at Center Grange hall Wednesday, Sept. 5th, at 10 a. m. A general invitation is extended to the fourth degree members to be present in the afternoon. Several leading cranes from different parts of the state will be present on their way to the Illinois encampment at Rockford. The 6 and 7 will take part in the speaking of the afternoon. Patrons come to this meeting, you can not afford to miss it.

—Elder Wells assists O. A. Richards in the protracted effort at Janesville Grange hall for the next fortnight. They will make a strong team.

—Miss Emma Gory, formerly of Osage, Iowa, and Miss Eliza Olsen, enter the Whitewater normal school this week for a full course.

—Will Olsen, of Grant, D. T., is making a flying visit with relatives Ooster and Janesville. Mr. Olsen is enjoying a good practice as an attorney and reports the crops fairly good in his section.

—The contest at the Rock county fair for the premier prize promises to be hotly contested. The boys will make a horse show worthy the occasion.

—School in District No. 1 and 2 commenced Monday, September 10. Prof. G. Snyder teacher in No. 1 and R. Howe, in district No. 2.

—Music both on the vocal and vocal-club meeting Saturday night. All true republicans are requested to attend and enjoy for the fall campaign. Come boys join the ranks for protection.

A Bargain.

A good chance to buy a home cheap. We have for sale on easy terms, two houses and lots on Laying street, first ward. For further particulars enquire at Kimball Hardware Co.

Some of these elegant houses are 25 cent each; smaller ones at 5 to 10 cents at the Magnet, East Milwaukee street.

BITS OF INFORMATION.

News of the Day Condensed in a Manner Commensurate with the Brevity of Human Life.

Admiral Porter is seriously ill at his cottage at Jamestown, N. H.

Senator Allison has promised to take the stump for the Republican ticket.

The Iowa Puffer, Cheese and Egg Association will hold its tenth annual convention at Waterloo November 12-16.

Dr. Alonzo J. Chidsey died at Decatur, Ill., Tuesday, August 28. He was at one time connected with the New York Daily News.

An epidemic of scarlet fever at South Fork, the Pennsylvania mountain resort, is causing a hurried exodus of summer visitors.

In a duel on the road in Washington County, Ky., Peter H. Hearn, a wealthy farmer, was shot dead by his son-in-law, Sam Milton.

A collision on the Dayton & Michigan road near Lima, O., caused by the negligence of a flagman, resulted in the injury of four persons.

At Chillicothe, Mo., Harry Hunsdon, whose vagabond life has been garbled by N. O'Connell, clothed, retailed by shooting and killing Mr. O'Connell.

A New York newspaper reporter has run down a herd of horses and vegetable thieves on Long Island. Many farmers have suffered from their depredations.

Fire at Cincinnati destroyed the six-story building owned by M. Goldsmith, and occupied by Herman Klein & Co. at a loss of $100,000—partially insured.

A motor and car on the electric railway at Pittsburgh ran away, dashing down a steep grade and plunging into a telegraph pole. Of the seven persons on the car, one was fatally and the others more or less seriously injured.

GONE TO HIS REWARD.

Death of an Aged Indiana Physician Who Was Noted for Many Decades During His Life.

New Albany, Ind., Aug. 28.—Dr. Nathaniel Field, a pioneer of Southern Indiana, eminent in the medical profession, and known throughout the State, died at his home in Jeffersonville, 84 years of age.

Dr. Field was surgeon of the Sixty-sixth Indiana Infantry during the war, and was in many battles. He was a minister of the Second Baptist church for 30 years.

He was a strong believer in and preacher of the world-wide brotherhood of man, and he and a number of his congregation had their own mission ready for the anticipated call.

He was a member of the first anti-slavery society organized in the West and liberated twenty-five slaves left him by his mother. He outlived his wife for 20 years and died in his 84th year.

He died from grief and shame.

Little Rock, Ark., Aug. 28.—Rev. Jesse Pratt, the oldest Baptist minister in Arkansas, died yesterday. His son, J. I. Pratt, was on trial for assaulting a woman, and the father expressed the opinion that he would die before the verdict was returned.

He expired five hours before the jury came in sentencing him to ten years' imprisonment. Grief and shame killed him.

When Justice Did Not Wait Very Long.

Our popular justice, Warren D. Lewis, is "a juke." He purchased one hundred tickets of $1.75 of the Louisiana State Lottery company, and at a public sale of the tickets, held on the 12th inst., that ticket drew the second capital prize of $100,000. "Yes," said the justice, to-day, June 22, "I received the money by express." Buffalo Signal, June 20.

JOHNSTOWN.

—We need a good rain now to help the corn along as the ground is dry and hard.

—Those that yet have grain and timothy in the shock that they want to thresh do not wait any more.

—Several steam threshers are busy in this neighborhood and as yet have threshed nothing but grain from the shock.

—Several horses about the neighborhood are troubled with what is called "cancer" and some have died.

—But few farmers have commenced plowing yet; most of it is generally done in the fall.

—An evangelist is to commence here Sunday next and speak to the people during the week and Wednesday is to be fellowship day when the neighboring societies are invited.

—Will Queney and wife were in town last week. They now reside in Milwaukee.

—Mr. Maguire, wife and daughter of Iowa, called on A. M. Carter last week.

—Mr. Hingman was born here.

—But few of the people have spent much time at Geneva Lake or any other camping ground this year as they have had too much business at home.

—Miss Sarah Haight is spending a few weeks with her brother in Chicago.

—Doctor Enoch of Fort Atkinson, an old resident here died on Sunday morning last.

—Mr. Denton, whose family here died at the Soldiers' Home at Milwaukee last week, a blessed thing to have a good home for old soldiers.

—On Wednesday last Rev. Thos. W. Monteth was duly installed pastor of the Rock Prairie Presbyterian church, sermon by the Rev. Mr. Galloway, and charge by the pastor by the Rev. Mr. Monteth.

—Mr. Monteth came to the city upon his labor under very favorable auspices. He is a gentleman in the prime of life, of prepossessing appearance, and his manners both in and out of the pulpit are such as to command the respect and good will of his people. He brings to this post an ample experience, his former charge being in a live city in Michigan.

—Rev. Smith Norton, of Beloit, in connection with the pastor, Rev. D. B. Jackson, held a service at the Congregational church of Old Johnston beginning on next Sunday. On Wednesday, September 5th a fellowship meeting will be held. Exhortation at 10:30 a. m. and 2 p. m. Neighboring congregations and ministers are cordially invited to participate.

ASTON.

—Wm. Klavick of Watertown, is visiting relatives in this place.

—Mr. F. Gillespie and family of Beloit were at W. H. Gilbert's Sunday.

—Rev. F. A. Marsh, of Beloit, at present pastor of the Baptist church here, held a service at the Rock Prairie church on Sunday.

—The pulpits were occupied by Rev. Porteous, representative of the Chicago Standard, in the morning and Rev. Mr. Rice of Jefferson occupied the evening exercises.

—Mr. O. H. T. Gilbert has gone to Milwaukee to visit relatives.

—Mr. U. G. Antisdel is having his home beautified with a coat of paint.

—Mr. and Mrs. George Osgood are happy over the arrival of 10 pound baby girl.

—All well.

—Further news from recent dates.

—Divers go down in divers places; but at our mouth of streams and bays, Lake those in heavy's mouth that mine found by the SIOUXIAN divine.

—Ladies and gent's pocket books and purses cheap, at King & Skelly's bookstore.

BIG APPROPRIATIONS.

Senator Allison Charges the Administration with Extravagance.

SENATOR DECK COMES TO ITS DEFENSE.

Vicious Language Employed by Senator Blackburn in Making Some Accusations Against Senator McKim—Other Capital News.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Consideration of the conference report on the Sunday Civil bill took up the entire time of the Senate.

The resolution offered by Senator McKim (Mass.) last Friday, with Senator Allison (Vt.) amendment, calling on the President for copies of correspondence with Great Britain relating to Canadian troubles was adopted.

Senator Allison (N. H.) then presented the conference report on the Sunday Civil bill, and made a long statement about the bill, as agreed upon in conference, and the points of disagreement between the Senate and House conferees.

While explaining the appropriations for public buildings Mr. Allison incidentally and with considerable feeling referred to the distinction apparently made by the President in approving public building bills in the House and disapproving similar bills in the Senate.

Public-building bills, he said, for small towns with from 2,000 to 6,000 people in Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and North Carolina were approved by the President, and the grandeur of the President's approval, while a bill had been sent back to the Senate (referring to the Sioux City, Ia., public building) was not approved.

Senator Allison (N. H.) then presented the conference report on the Sunday Civil bill, and made a long statement about the bill, as agreed upon in conference, and the points of disagreement between the Senate and House conferees.

While explaining the appropriations for public buildings Mr. Allison incidentally and with considerable feeling referred to the distinction apparently made by the President in approving public building bills in the House and disapproving similar bills in the Senate.

Public-building bills, he said, for small towns with from 2,000 to 6,000 people in Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and North Carolina were approved by the President, and the grandeur of the President's approval, while a bill had been sent back to the Senate (referring to the Sioux City, Ia., public building) was not approved.

Senator Allison (N. H.) then presented the conference report on the Sunday Civil bill, and made a long statement about the bill, as agreed upon in conference, and the points of disagreement between the Senate and House conferees.

While explaining the appropriations for public buildings Mr. Allison incidentally and with considerable feeling referred to the distinction apparently made by the President in approving public building bills in the House and disapproving similar bills in the Senate.

Public-building bills, he said, for small towns with from 2,000 to 6,000 people in Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and North Carolina were approved by the President, and the grandeur of the President's approval, while a bill had been sent back to the Senate (referring to the Sioux City, Ia., public building) was not approved.

Senator Allison (N. H.) then presented the conference report on the Sunday Civil bill, and made a long statement about the bill, as agreed upon in conference, and the points of disagreement between the Senate and House conferees.

While explaining the appropriations for public buildings Mr. Allison incidentally and with considerable feeling referred to the distinction apparently made by the President in approving public building bills in the House and disapproving similar bills in the Senate.

Public-building bills, he said, for small towns with from 2,000 to 6,000 people in Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and North Carolina were approved by the President, and the grandeur of the President's approval, while a bill had been sent back to the Senate (referring to the Sioux City, Ia., public building) was not approved.

Senator Allison (N. H.) then presented the conference report on the Sunday Civil bill, and made a long statement about the bill, as agreed upon in conference, and the points of disagreement between the Senate and House conferees.

While explaining the appropriations for public buildings Mr. Allison incidentally and with considerable feeling referred to the distinction apparently made by the President in approving public building bills in the House and disapproving similar bills in the Senate.

Public-building bills, he said, for small towns with from 2,000 to 6,000 people in Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and North Carolina were approved by the President, and the grandeur of the President's approval, while a bill had been sent back to the Senate (referring to the Sioux City, Ia., public building) was not approved.

Senator Allison (N. H.) then presented the conference report on the Sunday Civil bill, and made a long statement about the bill, as agreed upon in conference, and the points of disagreement between the Senate and House conferees.

While explaining the appropriations for public buildings Mr. Allison incidentally and with considerable feeling referred to the distinction apparently made by the President in approving public building bills in the House and disapproving similar bills in the Senate.

Public-building bills, he said, for small towns with from 2,000 to 6,000 people in Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and North Carolina were approved by the President, and the grandeur of the President's approval, while a bill had been sent back to the Senate (referring to the Sioux City, Ia., public building) was not approved.

Senator Allison (N. H.) then presented the conference report on the Sunday Civil bill, and made a long statement about the bill, as agreed upon in conference, and the points of disagreement between the Senate and House conferees.

While explaining the appropriations for public buildings Mr. Allison incidentally and with considerable feeling referred to the distinction apparently made by the President in approving public building bills in the House and disapproving similar bills in the Senate.

Public-building bills, he said, for small towns with from 2,000 to 6,000 people in Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and North Carolina were approved by the President, and the grandeur of the President's approval, while a bill had been sent back to the Senate (referring to the Sioux City, Ia., public building) was not approved.

Senator Allison (N. H.) then presented the conference report on the Sunday Civil bill, and made a long statement about the bill, as agreed upon in conference, and the points of disagreement between the Senate and House conferees.

While explaining the appropriations for public buildings Mr. Allison incidentally and with considerable feeling referred to the distinction apparently made by the President in approving public building bills in the House and disapproving similar bills in the Senate.

Public-building bills, he said, for small towns with from 2,000 to 6,000 people in Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and North Carolina were approved by the President, and the grandeur of the President's approval, while a bill had been sent back to the Senate (referring to the Sioux City, Ia., public building) was not approved.

Senator Allison (N. H.) then presented the conference report on the Sunday Civil bill, and made a long statement about the bill, as agreed upon in conference, and the points of disagreement between the Senate and House conferees.

While explaining the appropriations for public buildings Mr. Allison incidentally and with considerable feeling referred to the distinction apparently made by the President in approving public building bills in the House and disapproving similar bills in the Senate.

Public-building bills, he said, for small towns with from 2,000 to 6,000 people in Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and North Carolina were approved by the President, and the grandeur of the President's approval, while a bill had been sent back to the Senate (referring to the Sioux City, Ia., public building) was not approved.

Senator Allison (N. H.) then presented the conference report on the Sunday Civil bill, and made a long statement about the bill, as agreed upon in conference, and the points of disagreement between the Senate and House conferees.

While explaining the appropriations for public buildings Mr. Allison incidentally and with considerable feeling referred to the distinction apparently made by the President in approving public building bills in the House and disapproving similar bills in the Senate.

Public-building bills, he said, for small towns with from 2,000 to 6,000 people in Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and North Carolina were approved by the President, and the grandeur of the President's approval, while a bill had been sent back to the Senate (referring to the Sioux City, Ia., public building) was not approved.

Senator Allison (N. H.) then presented the conference report on the Sunday Civil bill, and made a long statement about the bill, as agreed upon in conference, and the points of disagreement between the Senate and House conferees.

While explaining the appropriations for public buildings Mr. Allison incidentally and with considerable feeling referred to the distinction apparently made by the President in approving public building bills in the House and disapproving similar bills in the Senate.

Public-building bills, he said, for small towns with from 2,000 to 6,000 people in Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and North Carolina were approved by the President, and the grandeur of the President's approval, while a bill had been sent back to the Senate (referring to the Sioux City, Ia., public building) was not approved.

Senator Allison (N. H.) then presented the conference report on the Sunday Civil bill, and made a long statement about the bill, as agreed upon in conference, and the points of disagreement between the Senate and House conferees.

While explaining the appropriations for public buildings Mr. Allison incidentally and with considerable feeling referred to the distinction apparently made by the President in approving public building bills in the House and disapproving similar bills in the Senate.

Public-building bills, he said, for small towns with from 2,000 to 6,000 people in Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and North Carolina were approved by the President, and the grandeur of the President's approval, while a bill had been sent back to the Senate (referring to the Sioux City, Ia., public building) was not approved.

Senator Allison (N. H.) then presented the conference report on the Sunday Civil bill, and made a long statement about the bill, as agreed upon in conference, and the points of disagreement between the Senate and House conferees.

While explaining the appropriations for public buildings Mr. Allison incidentally and with considerable feeling referred to the distinction apparently made by the President in approving public building bills in the House and disapproving similar bills in the Senate.

Public-building bills, he said, for small towns with from 2,000 to 6,000 people in Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and North Carolina were approved by the President, and the grandeur of the President's approval, while a bill had been sent back to the Senate (referring to the Sioux City, Ia., public building) was not approved.

Senator Allison (N. H.) then presented the conference report on the Sunday Civil bill, and made a long statement about the bill, as agreed upon in conference, and the points of disagreement between the Senate and House conferees.

While explaining the appropriations for public buildings Mr. Allison incidentally and with considerable feeling referred to the distinction apparently made by the President in approving public building bills in the House and disapproving similar bills in the Senate.

Public-building bills, he said, for small towns with from 2,000 to 6,000 people in Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and North Carolina were approved by the President, and the grandeur of the President's approval, while a bill had been sent back to the Senate (referring to the Sioux City, Ia., public building) was not approved.

Senator Allison (N. H.) then presented the conference report on the Sunday Civil bill, and made a long statement about the bill, as agreed upon in conference, and the points of disagreement between the Senate and House conferees.

While explaining the appropriations for public buildings Mr. Allison incidentally and with considerable feeling referred to the distinction apparently made by the President in approving public building bills in the House and disapproving similar bills in the Senate.

Public-building bills, he said, for small towns with from 2,000 to 6,000 people in Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and North Carolina were approved by the President, and the grandeur of the President's approval, while a bill had been sent back to the Senate (referring to the Sioux City, Ia., public building) was not approved.

Senator Allison (N. H.) then presented the conference report on the Sunday Civil bill, and made a long statement about the bill, as agreed upon in conference, and the points of disagreement between the Senate and House conferees.

While explaining the appropriations for public buildings Mr. Allison incidentally and with considerable feeling referred to the distinction apparently made by the President in approving public building bills in the House and disapproving similar bills in the Senate.

Public-building bills, he said, for small towns with from 2,000 to 6,000 people in Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and North Carolina were approved by the President, and the grandeur of the President's approval, while a bill had been sent back to the Senate (referring to the Sioux City, Ia., public building) was not approved.

Senator Allison (N. H.) then presented the conference report on the Sunday Civil bill, and made a long statement about the bill, as agreed upon in conference, and the points of disagreement between the Senate and House conferees.

While explaining the appropriations for public buildings Mr. Allison incidentally and with considerable feeling referred to the distinction apparently made by the President in approving public building bills in the House and disapproving similar bills in the Senate.

Public-building bills, he said, for small towns with from 2,000 to 6,000 people in Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and North Carolina were approved by the President, and the grandeur of the President's approval, while a bill had been sent back to the Senate (referring to the Sioux City, Ia., public building) was not approved.

Senator Allison (N. H.) then presented the conference report on the Sunday Civil bill, and made a long statement about the bill, as agreed upon in conference, and the points of disagreement between the Senate and House conferees.

While explaining the appropriations for public buildings Mr. Allison incidentally and with considerable feeling referred to the distinction apparently made by the President in approving public building bills in the House and disapproving similar bills in the Senate.

Public-building bills, he said, for small towns with from 2,000 to 6,000 people in Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and North Carolina were approved by the President, and the grandeur of the President's approval, while a bill had been sent back to the Senate (referring to the Sioux City, Ia., public building) was not approved.

Senator Allison (N. H.) then presented the conference report on the Sunday Civil bill, and made a long statement about the bill, as agreed upon in conference, and the points of disagreement between the Senate and House conferees.

While explaining the appropriations for public buildings Mr. Allison incidentally and with considerable feeling referred to the distinction apparently made by the President in approving public building bills in the House and disapproving similar bills in the Senate.

Public-building bills, he said, for small towns with from 2,000 to 6,000 people in Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and North Carolina were approved by the President, and the grandeur of the President's approval, while a bill had been sent back to the Senate (referring to the Sioux City, Ia., public building) was not approved.

Senator Allison (N. H.) then presented the conference report on the Sunday Civil bill, and made a long statement about the bill, as agreed upon in conference, and the points of disagreement between the Senate and House conferees.

While explaining the appropriations for public buildings Mr. Allison incidentally and with considerable feeling referred to the distinction apparently made by the President in approving public building bills in the House and disapproving similar bills in the Senate.

Public-building bills, he said, for small towns with from 2,000 to 6,000 people in Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and North Carolina were approved by the President, and the grandeur of the President's approval, while a bill had been sent back to the Senate (referring to the Sioux City, Ia., public building) was not approved.

Senator Allison (N. H.) then presented the conference report on the Sunday Civil bill, and made a long statement about the bill, as agreed upon in conference, and the points of disagreement between the Senate and House conferees.

While explaining the appropriations for public buildings Mr. Allison incidentally and with considerable feeling referred to the distinction apparently made by the President in approving public building bills in the House and disapproving similar bills in the Senate.

Public-building bills, he said, for small towns with from 2,000 to 6,000 people in Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and North Carolina were approved by the President, and the grandeur of the President's approval, while a bill had been sent back to the Senate (referring to the Sioux City, Ia., public building) was not approved.

Senator Allison (N. H.) then presented the conference report on the Sunday Civil bill, and made a long statement about the bill, as agreed upon in conference, and the points of disagreement between the Senate and House conferees.

While explaining the appropriations for public buildings Mr. Allison incidentally and with considerable feeling referred to the distinction apparently made by the President in approving public building bills in the House and disapproving similar bills in the Senate.

Public-building bills, he said, for small towns with from 2,000 to 6,000 people in Mississippi, Arkansas, Texas and North Carolina were approved by the President, and the grandeur of the President's approval, while a bill had been sent back to the Senate (referring to the Sioux City, Ia., public building) was not

